FDR

"Whether you liked him or not," says narrator Arthur Kennedy, "he was a rare one." So, it might be said, is this ABC program—one which gives you, week by week, as a kind of serial documentary, the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. "He was the greatest campaigner I ever knew," says former Democratic National Chairman James Farley in one interview. "What he would have done with TV beggars description."

Well now, thanks to the masterful blending job of interviews, stills and films by producers Robert Graff and Ben Feiner Jr., and also thanks to Charlton Heston (who does a remarkable job of speaking Roosevelt's lines in Rooseveltian fashion), Franklin gets his chance—complete with, as Kennedy says, "his wave, his face, his cigaret holder, his infirmity, his smile, his voice."

One thing, however, has worried us as we watched this show. Based, of course, largely on news footage, it illustrates both the wonders and dangers of film. For though film brings history wondrously alive, it also illustrates the narrowness of television's, and the newsreel's, conception of "news." If we aren't careful, future generations, seeing history this way, will think of it as nothing more than a handful of prancing personalities.

But make no mistake about it, Roosevelt had what it takes to make a show. We may never get to the real Roosevelt—"He was a very talkative man," his Labor Secretary, Frances Perkins, tells us, "yet he dropped a curtain over himself, from his real self"—but we do get both sides of the man who influenced American history longer, if not more, than any other person. And we get these sides with no holds barred—all the way from the peerless Eleanor ("His mother wrote him that if he recognized Russia she would never again come to the White House. He did and of course, two weeks later, she came. They were very much alike") to the gibbering Westbrook Pegler ("Giuseppe Zangara [who aimed at Roosevelt but hit the mayor of Chicago] shot the wrong man. . . . The facts will bear me out").

Best of all, the program gives us, in generous measure, perhaps FDR's greatest gift, his humor. Whether it was about his liking to sleep late ("I think we consider too much the good luck of the early bird and not enough the bad luck of the early worm") or his sudden desire one day at the White House for some oysters which the Secret Service hadn't had the time to test ("I tell you what," he told his secretary, Grace Tully. "You and Mr. Farley and Mr. Howe eat some now and if you're still alive tonight, I'll have some with my dinner"), humor was always with him. And he used it in more crucial matters—as for example, in his first campaign after his polio—with extreme effectiveness ("I cannot run, so I am counting on each one of you to make it possible for me to walk in").

TV TELETYPE*: HOLLYWOOD: DWIGHT WHITNEY REPORTS:

Where will the new TV stars come from? Why, from the old TV shows, of course! A few of the familiar faces which will be seen in new series next season: EFREM ZIMBALIST JR. and ROGER SMITH (77 Sunset Strip) in The FBI Story and Mr. Roberts respectively; ROBERT HORTON (Wagon Train) in A Man Called Shenandoah; LLOYD BRIDGES (Sea Hunt) in The Loner; and JOHN FORSYTHE (Bachelor Father) and ANN B. DAVIS (The Bob Cummings Show) in The Mr. and the Misses . . . Meanwhile, BRODERICK CRAWFORD (Highway Patrol) and JACK LORD (Stoney Burke) are co-starring in an upcoming Kraft Suspense Theatre.

Little JOHNNY CRAWFORD of The Rifleman isn't little any more. He has taped five songs for DICK CLARK's new Shebang . . . On the other hand, young RYAN O'NEAL of Peyton Place has withdrawn from a recording contract rather than do rock 'n' roll . . . GENE BARRY will make a night-club appearance in London.

test that BAYER®
meets best

What's more, here are some facts on how Bayer Aspirin meets the test of competition.

Reporting on a government-financed study of five leading pain relievers, an article in The Journal of The American Medical Association shows:

For speed and strength of relief, Bayer Aspirin is unsurpassed by any product tested, including the so called "extra-strength" one that claims to be 50% stronger.

Of special concern, the product that claims to be 50% stronger than aspirin does upset the stomach with significantly greater frequency than Bayer Aspirin.

In fact, Bayer Aspirin is as gentle to the stomach as any product tested, including the higher-priced buffered product.

For fast relief from headaches, muscular pains, or the pains and fever of a cold, get Bayer Aspirin, the world's favorite brand of pain reliever.

as we see it

■ Hugh Downs came up with an interesting idea a few weeks ago when he spoke at the dedication of a new communications center at Stephens College—a Missouri haven for beautiful young girl communicators.

The Today star was deploring the pain of the viewer who is all ready to tune to an exceptional program of "deep interest and genuine educational value" only to find that another program of the same type is scheduled at the same time on another channel. As examples he pointed to ABC's program on Leonardo da Vinci opposite NBC's "The Journals of Lewis and Clark," ABC's "Inger Stevens in Sweden" opposite NBC's "The Restless Sea," and others.

■ Downs suggested that some self-policing body in the television industry set up a plan to prevent such duplication, just as the motion picture producers group prevents simultaneous movie openings and the League of New York Theaters sees to it that no two Broadway plays open on the same night. The idea of a clearinghouse of sorts that would see to it that no two networks present excellent programs at the same time is ironical, but sensible.

Still, there is an alternative. It is competition, competition to present a well-balanced schedule as well as to attract the highest ratings, competition to offer viewers programs that will exercise their minds as well as their eyes, competition to fulfill the potentialities of television that we glimpse only from time to time.

■ We like the alternative better. Unfortunately, it's a dream. And despite the irony of what Hugh Downs suggests, we have to go along with him. Let's not waste what few extraordinarily good programs are broadcast by permitting them to be scheduled at the same time.

The quiet 'Man from U.N.C.L.E.,' David McCallum, is a dour Scot who can't understand all the fuss the girls are making

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, within whose storied confines is filmed The Man from U.N.C.L.E., reports had filtered in—presumably from U.N.C.L.E. agents or defectors from the mortal enemy, THRUSH—that David McCallum had assumed an extraordinary status in the hearts of American womanhood. He had become, in the argot, a “sex symbol.”

David McCallum, 5-feet, 8-inches at his most stretchable, slight of build,

'The
greatest thing since peanut butter and jelly'

31 years old, solidly married and the father of three, a product of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, a character actor for most of his career—here was definitely a non-beachboy type and, on reflection, a most unlikely candidate to symbolize sex.

But, as the old-time movie producers used to say, it's the public that decides. This past winter McCallum, who portrays Illya Kuryakin in NBC's epic of James Bondian derring-do, was sent out on his first promotion tour on behalf of U.N.C.L.E. The extent of his appeal was quickly established. In Dallas a gaggle of 50 girls descended on McCallum, his wife Jill, and the accompanying MGM publicist, flattening McCallum against a wall. One of the girls turned to Mrs. McCallum. "Do you mind?" she asked, deferentially, and then she planted on McCallum a resounding kiss.

On the Louisiana State University campus at Baton Rouge, McCallum was surrounded by 2000 screaming coeds, and 14 policemen hustled in to extricate him. At the airport in Springfield, Ill., 500 teen-agers greeted McCallum waving placards reading: FLUSH THRUSS and ALL THE WAY WITH ILLYA K. At the Hollywood premiere of "The Greatest Story Ever Told," in which McCallum portrays Judas Iscariot, the stars parading under the marquee included Julie Andrews, Danny Kaye, Charlton Heston—but the fans in the street, largely female, saved their noisiest ovation for David McCallum.

"It's disquieting—that's what it is," says McCallum, who speaks off-camera, as on, with a slight Scottish accent diluted through years of speech training into nonspecific British. "With my Calvinist background and my deep Presbyterian blood, with my stiff Scottish spine, to be told you're suddenly a 'sex symbol'—it's just disquieting."

Still, the public really does make its decisions on such matters and the mail, on McCallum's behalf, continues to avalanche. "Dear David, Your wild haircut reminds me of an intellectual Beatle," a Chicago teen-ager writes. From New Jersey another teen-age girl expresses her undying affection with: "You're the greatest thing since peanut butter and jelly." On a more prosaic note, a boy of indeterminate age wrote in with a reasonable request: "Dear Mr. McCallum, could you please send me a continued quarter of a pound of explosives?"

After one episode of U.N.C.L.E., in which the script called for McCallum to kiss actress Susan Oliver, three Wellesley College girls promptly wired: "Please, no more kissing. You will destroy your image with us." And to Norman Felton, executive producer, the same Wellesley scholars wrote: "If you hire anyone as a romantic lead opposite Illya Kuryakin, MGM studios and every TV set tuned to U.N.C.L.E. will be blown to smithereens and all Wellesley students will double-cross U.N.C.L.E. for THRUSH." McCallum, in tune with his fans, wired back: "My faithful comrades in arms: Certain subversive THRUSH agents can only be uncovered by a variety of experiences. . . . Regret no man is perfect. [Signed] Illya Kuryakin."

Illya the idol

A long-time studio observer of such phenomena explains, "It's the psychology of the movie or TV idol. The women secretly yearn to have him for themselves and they resent any actress as a threat. It's daydream, fantasy stuff, but isn't that what this business is all about?"

If David McCallum, whose previous TV experience includes roles in Perry Mason, The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters, The Outer Limits and Profiles in Courage, seems an improbable type to emerge as a sex symbol, his characterization of Illya Kuryakin would appear even less likely to bestir such ardent response. Says Sam Rolfe, the producer-writer who developed the series: "I had the lead well set in my mind. Bob Vaughn, as Napoleon Solo, would be a Cary Grant type. As for Illya, all I knew was that he was a Russian, but it was a vague, smoky thing. David gave the role a life force. The way he plays him, Illya will never be the guy who goes out for sandwiches."

It was McCallum who created the vaguely European, mystic quality and the distinctive Kuryakin costume of black coat, black corduroy pants and black turtle-neck sweater. "I like Illya—I'd like to have him for a friend," says McCallum and then, having purposely lampooned the prize cliché uttered by actors in discussing their roles, erupts into a king-size grin. "Who knows if Illya has any friends? We're not doing a Route 66 here, with a couple of chums on the loose. We are totally individual. Napoleon Solo is obviously a swinger. Ah, but Illya is a quiet swinger. Nobody knows what Illya Kuryakin does when he goes home at night."

It was also McCallum who introduced the persistent and intriguing note of friction between Illya and his superior, Napoleon Solo. "I thought a little animosity would add interest," McCallum says.

Surprisingly, considering McCallum's swift rise in what is nominally a second-banana role, no discernible off-stage friction exists between him and Robert Vaughn. "We don't socialize, but then we inhabit different worlds," McCallum explains. "Bob's a bachelor. I'm a family man. In Hollywood, as elsewhere, that's two different universes."

Says Vaughn about his colleague: "David is one of the very few of my acting contemporaries whom I respect. He's a pro. He knows his business. Most American actors don't come up to David's level after seven years in analysis."

McCallum returns the compliment. "We have an unspoken mutual respect," he says. "Bob and I, we never worry about treading on each other's toes. And we never complain about the series like a 'grumble' of actors. A pride of lions, a bevy of girls, a 'grumble' of actors—put two TV series actors together and they compare complaints. Well, I say if an actor can't make his work interesting, he should try another trade."

David Keith McCallum was born 31 years ago in Glasgow, Scotland, second son of David McCallum, a violinist who later became concert-master of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, a position he still holds, and Dorothy McCallum, a cellist. His parents had met in the orchestra pit of a theater where they played accompaniment to silent movies.

He ended up with an oboe

The urge to act struck early, but David was first pressed into music. "I ended up with the oboe—the ill wind nobody blows good," McCallum says. "I could wham my way through symphonies but I hated to practice. So, I had this uncle who needed an oboe and I sold it to him for 85 pounds."

As a child actor, David worked on BBC radio shows, displaying a precocious proficiency with dialects. "Perhaps I grew up too fast," McCallum reflects. "When I should have been bashing around and punching other kids, I was preparing for an artistic career but not a competitive society. I never roughed it. I missed the aggressive age. Probably led to my introvertive streak."

After two years at the Royal Academy, a stint as a prop man with an opera company, another two years in the British Army, including 10 months in Ghana as a small-arms expert, McCallum returned to acting with repertory companies in the English provinces. By 1957, after a rigorous apprenticeship, he was a rising player in British films. In the same year he spotted a magazine portrait of an unconventionally lovely English actress named Jill Ireland and set out to marry her, which he did seven days after they were introduced.

Today the McCallums and brood—Paul, 7, Jason, 3, and Valentine, 2—live in a four-story, 11-room Spanish-style house in the Hollywood hills, a location chosen with typical Scot acumen. "If you take all the studios in Hollywood and draw a circle connecting them, our house would be right in the center," McCallum says with a touch of pride.

McCallum likes to quote a line from the script of a Profiles in Courage in which he played John Adams: "Adams would say, 'I am not what people think I am.' I suppose I'm not, either." McCallum fits no mold. At once impish-humored and serious, he talks knowledgeably of the theater, of art, literature, music (he composed the theme for an Outer Limits); he can also wire a house and he put together his own stereo with multiplex receiver.

When anger overtakes him—he is occasionally victim to churning, unreleased rage caused by someone else's or his own real or imagined ineptness—McCallum will drive to downtown Los Angeles and wander about that unappealing area.

"I go to negative places for therapy," McCallum says with moderate seriousness. "When I can't sleep at night I'll go see a wide-screen, cornball semiromantic picture like 'Vera Cruz,' or I'll see some pretentious foreign movie."

Although he refers to himself as a "dour Scot," McCallum dissolves with laughter at Laurel and Hardy comedies, and pie-throwing slapstick leaves him helpless.

"We Scots, we tend to be awfully tight inside," McCallum says with resignation. "We have a tremendous emotion underneath. It stirs there, untapped. The problem is wrenching it out. It has hurt me as an actor to be so—so naturally restricted. I had to learn to expand, to give. Acting is more than just learning words and spouting them and being given money for it. Acting is giving. I have no idea what being a 'sex symbol' is."

THE WOMAN HAS THE LAST WORD ... and, in this case, the last punch too

Kathy Nolan comes upon Flynn in the commissary and—zowie!—lets him have it.

When writer Arnold Hano profiled Kathy Nolan of ABC's Broadside in TV Guide (Jan. 9), he quoted her: "When someone resists me, it brings out a spark. I love a fight. It excites me."

You might gather from these pictures that she wasn't kidding. This time, she was. Her opponent is Joe Flynn, of McHale's Navy. The place: Universal Studios commissary. The fight: all in fun.

It all harks back to the Hano story in which Kathy was quoted as saying, "Broadside involves serious actors and actresses doing comedy. McHale is a bunch of stand-up comics. We're doing a job. They're a bunch of goof-ups."

Flynn and his cohorts, after reading the story, shot off a letter to TV Guide

(Feb. 20) which said of Broadside in part: "Inasmuch as we blazed a path in a field in which you are a pale copy, we are not deserving of your gratuitous insult."

When Kathy saw that and then met Flynn in the commissary, she told him she was merely trying to suggest that Broadside was just getting underway and the cast didn't have time to horse around, while the McHale group, containing several ex-standup comics, not only has the ability to invent gags but time to use them.

She gave Flynn only enough time to get a satisfied "Oh" out of his mouth, then really surprised him with a hammerlock. She tickled him to the ground—thus proving she has at least a little time to horse around too.

All in fun: Playfully tickling, wrestling and dragging Flynn from his seat to the floor, Kathy pretends to beat him vigorously as bystanders urge her on. She moved so fast that the photographer, in the commissary on another assignment, came up with only a blurred record of the encounter which, as usual, the woman won.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

April Shower: The first viewing week of April produced a shower of special programs of all descriptions. Sunday, April 4, brought viewers an ABC documentary about the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur. The next night an estimated 75 percent of the TV audience tuned to ABC's Academy Awards telecast and saw one of the most entertaining and well-produced Oscarcasts ever. In an unfortunate bit of scheduling that could easily have been avoided, CBS Reports broadcast its most provocative show of the season, "Abortion and the Law," directly opposite the Oscar show in most sections of the country. Tuesday night offered an NBC White Paper on another subject of current concern, "Terror in the Streets." Then, on Wednesday, April 7, all three networks telecast President Johnson's address about the Vietnam situation. Earlier in the evening, Julie Harris lit up the screen, portraying Florence Nightingale in Hallmark Hall of Fame's "The Holy Terror," over NBC. Thursday night Perry Como presented one of his NBC specials. And, rounding out a splendid week of television, ABC scheduled a Saga of Western Man film, "Custer to the Little Big Horn," for showing Friday evening.

The Court Rules: Can a television advertiser use an unauthentic demonstration to "prove" a claim about his product even if the claim is true? No, said the U.S. Supreme Court last week, upholding a 1963 Federal Trade Commission ruling. The specific TV commercial at issue was the one claiming that Rapid Shave's softening qualities made it possible to shave sandpaper; a mock-up, actually made of sand-covered Plexiglas, was used to demonstrate the validity of the claim. The Court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Earl Warren, held that whether the claim was true or not, it was not cricket to use "undisclosed props" for demonstrative proof. Two of the nine justices dissented. In summarizing their dissent, Justice John M. Harlan noted that he is not a shaving-cream user (he's an electric-shaver man) but that the other dissenter, Justice Potter Stewart, is. Didn't say what brand.

High-Flying Bird: The new communications satellite, Early Bird ("For the Record," April 3), appears to be capable of doing just about anything except eating a worm. Comsat engineers tried it out April 7, the day after it was launched into orbit, and Early Bird received, amplified and transmitted back to Earth an "excellent" television picture. All that remained was to adjust the speed and orbit of the high-flying (23,000 miles up) bird so that it is precisely synchronized with the Earth's rotation. Then it will be ready to take up its duties as the first commercial communications satellite, and begin relaying television programs and telephone calls between the U.S. and Europe.

ROSTEN'S NETWORK

Leo Rosten probably didn't realize it but his point No. 6 of "If I Had a Network" [TV GUIDE, April 3] . . . concerning a local "Letters to the Manager" program [is] almost verbatim the manner in which we have conducted our local efforts weekly for nearly four years. His suggested format was a carbon copy of [General Manager] Mike Shapiro's . . . program.

Mary Harris

Leo Rosten's suggestions for upgrading TV programming are praiseworthy, but some are far from unique. The operations of a night court or the harbor police are hardly "unexploited reservoirs." Both have been made into TV series—and a telephone exchange has been the setting of at least one TV drama that I can remember. The plays of Galsworthy, Pinero and Wilde have not been unknown on television. . . . And they do have festivals where the year's best TV commercials are judged—both here and in Europe.

PROGNOSIS FOR DR. CASEY

No matter how many times it occurs, it is always startling to read of "stars" like Vince Edwards rationalizing economics and aesthetics. TINY TELEVISION

Cleveland Amory stated in his review of The King Family [TV GUIDE, April 3] that there are two Kings per square inch (18 square inches) on his screen. This means that his screen could be no larger than six inches wide and three inches high. No wonder he always gives bad reviews!

PRO BASKETBALL

SPECIAL The winners of the Eastern and Western division play-offs meet in the first game of this best-of-seven NBA Championship series. Today's opener is telecast from the home city of the Eastern Division winner.

At press time, the division titles were unresolved. In the East, the Boston Celtics were battling the Philadelphia 76ers. And in the West, the Los Angeles Lakers were playing the Baltimore Bullets.

The Celtics, NBA champs for six straight years, are favored to repeat. Led by Bill Russell and high-scorer Sam Jones, they have been almost unbeatable this season—with a league record of 62 wins and only 18 losses. Wilt Chamberlain must play at his best if the 76ers are to score an upset.

Without the injured Elgin Baylor, the Lakers lean heavily on Jerry West and are still favored over the Bullets, who are led by pivot-man Walt Bellamy. Surprise winners over St. Louis in an earlier play-off, the Bullets were 37-43 this season.

Chris Schenkel and Bob Cousy report from either Boston Garden or Philadelphia's Convention Hall.

New Kind of Health Insurance

PAYS YOU FOR STAYING WELL!

Generous cash benefits if you need them—money back if you stay well!

Steadily rising medical costs have put millions of Americans in a very dangerous spot. Their present health insurance is no longer enough. (Recent figures released by the American Hospital Association show that the average cost of one day's stay in the hospital has more than doubled in the last 10 years—from $18.35 to $36.83.)

Today, when sickness or accident strikes, most folks find that instead of their health insurance paying the big portion of the bills, they have to come up with the lion's share out of their own pocket.

Until now there were only two ways to solve this serious problem: You could gamble on never being sick, or take out more health insurance that you might never use. But continued now all this is changed. The insurance company that already protects thousands of Californians and their families has come up with a new answer. A new kind of policy that pays off sick or well . . . a policy that says you must collect.

Pays cash when you're sick or hurt

Like ordinary health insurance, this plan pays generous specified cash benefits for covered sickness or accidents off the job. These benefits are paid directly to you in cash, over and above what you get from any other insurance. But . . . unlike ordinary policies, you needn't be sick or hurt to get paid!

Pays money back if you stay well!

If you stay well . . . if you don't need all the protection, you get money back. Instead of simply paying premiums for protection you may not use, you get a cash refund at maturity. In effect, you have built an extra savings account.

Even if you use up part of the benefits to help pay for hospital room, doctor bills and surgeon's fees, you still get a refund when your policy matures. All the unused benefits come back to you in a lump sum cash payment. In other words, the policy must pay off. You must collect!

This revolutionary policy, NC-701, is offered only by the Certified Life Insurance Company of California as part of the famous White Cross Plan of low-cost, high-quality protection. Today, men, women and children from all parts of California look to the White Cross emblem for security and peace of mind.

Certified pays all claims directly from its Los Angeles home office, living up to its famous promise to "get the money to you fast."

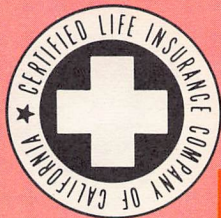

Blue Book tells the entire story

The complete story of this remarkable "money back" plan is told in the Blue Book, an interesting and informative booklet offered free by Certified Life Insurance Company.

10:00 3 4 OUR MAN IN WASHINGTON

SPECIAL COLOR David Brinkley, NBC's "man" in the capital, takes a look at the protocol, bureaucracy, manners, social life and frantic development of today's Washington.

Beginning with the days when George Washington systematically planned the capital's construction, Brinkley reviews the physical changes that have contributed to today's urban confusion.

Rare photographs from the Bell Picture Collection, and woodcuts and etchings are used to recall an unhurried, 19th-century Washington. Long-lost landmarks are rediscovered, as well as a dusty collection of never-used plans for Washington beautification—and Brinkley also examines President Johnson's blueprints for future improvement.

As an example of mushrooming bureaucracy that results in wasted effort, producer Ted Yates focuses his cameras on the Agriculture Department, where two employees are hard at work: one finding ways to increase milk production, the other trying to eliminate milk surpluses. Also seen: a unique etiquette school whose clientele includes congressmen, senators and diplomats. (60 min.)

What's happened to it since last year?

Improving something that pulled more than 27 million visitors its first time around isn't easy. But it's been done.

And no one will really know just how much the Fair has been changed until it opens its gates for the second, and final, year of its existence.

This CBS Special Events program will take you there on opening night so you can see for yourself. Using live and taped camera shots, CBS commentators will examine both the new attractions and the many improvements made in the old.

It's something worth watching if you're thinking of visiting the Fair this year. Or if you just want to know what's happened since last year.

'CONGRESS WILL NOT STAND IDLY BY'

Washington warns of action if those movies are sold to TV

Second of three parts by LESLIE RADDATZ

"Sex and the Single Girl" is a rather innocuous and sometimes amusing motion picture ("Silly little comedy"—Time). It was the movie shown on the plane I took from Los Angeles to Washington to talk to senators and congressmen and others influential in communications, about what might happen if and when some of the more gamy current films appear on television—pictures like "Kiss Me, Stupid" and "The Carpetbaggers" and even such a recent low-budget bedraggled as "The Naked Kiss," which is already being peddled around the TV market places.

"Sex and the Single Girl" will probably be on television within the next few years. But when its producers, Warner Brothers, showed the Code Authority of the National Association of Broadcasters 12 TV commercials advertising the film, only two were found acceptable. The remaining 10 were rejected because they were made up of scenes or audio which violated the NAB Code—and which, incidentally, shown out of context, made "Sex and the Single Girl" seem far more risqué than it really is.

This very technique of showing scenes out of context is the one that brought anguished cries from television executives when they testified before the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency, under the chairmanship of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D., Conn.).

Last July, the Dodd committee showed a few particularly grim scenes from an NBC Saturday Night at the Movies, "The Naked Spur," which was characterized by Variety when it was originally released in 1953 as "probably too raw and brutal for some theatergoers." When NBC executive vice president Walter D. Scott attempted to defend the film, Senator Dodd, a quiet, mild-mannered man, exploded: "You do not see any real relationship between the violence in our society and the brutal, sadistic, indecent or objectionable television show and the public clamor about the breakdown of our society. We have got a crime explosion in this country. You say this has nothing to do with this at all. Yet parents, teachers, law enforcement people—a vast majority of them—say it does. What are you going to do? Just go on feeding us this stuff? Do we have to take it? What do you propose to do?"

Although Scott somewhat lamely admitted there was "an area here for real concern," he said, "I think that there will always be a conflict between the desires of creative people, who want to express themselves freely, and the judgments of those responsible people who are charged with the responsibility of putting on a good, a balanced, essentially an all-family entertainment and informational and cultural schedule."

This exchange was one of the latest in a running battle which has been going on for the past 10 years between the broadcasting industry and the Senate subcommittee. So far it has primarily concerned programs which were made expressly for television, but Senator Dodd sent chills up Hollywood's spine this winter when he announced that he planned to investigate the motion pictures that are finding their way to TV.

When I talked to Senator Dodd, he said, "When I was a kid, there were hootchy-kootchy dancers at the carnivals that came to town, but the whole town didn't turn out to see them. Now if the trash of the film industry gets on television, it will add a new complexity to an already complex situation. It will require a whole new look at the television industry by Congress and the FCC."

Although Dodd says he hopes no Government action will be necessary, he says, "If it does come, it will be because of abuse." But he acknowledges, "This is a very sticky area." The area is sticky, of course, because of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which provides: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

In 1915, the Supreme Court held that movies were not entitled to such guarantees—that they were "a business pure and simple . . . a spectacle or show and not such vehicles of thought as to bring them within the press of the country. . . . Their power of amusement and, it may be, education, the audiences they assemble, not of women alone or men alone, but together, not of adults only, but of children, make them the more insidious in corruption by a pretense of worthy purpose." This decision was reversed in 1952 in a case involving a motion picture called "The Miracle," in which a feeble-minded peasant woman gave herself to a man she thought was St. Joseph. The Supreme Court ruled that movies were entitled to free-speech guarantees.

Concerning the First Amendment, Justice William O. Douglas has said, "The First Amendment was designed to enlarge, not to limit, freedom in literature and in arts, as well as in politics, economics, law and other fields. . . . Its aim was to unlock all ideas for argument, debate and dissemination. No more potent force in defeat of that freedom could be designed than censorship. It is a weapon that no minority or majority group, acting through government, should be allowed to wield over any of us."

But when it comes to the possibility of smutty movies on television, Senator Dodd says, "I think continued

'If the trash... gets on TV...

it will require a whole new look at the industry
by Congress and the FCC.'

the Court will take a different view as the situation worsens—Mr. Dooley was right when he said the Supreme Court follows the election returns.”

Former Sen. Kenneth Keating (R., N.Y.) has said, “As a lawyer, I am fully cognizant of the First Amendment rights enjoyed by communications media in this country, and I do not advocate Government control of the airwaves. As a father and grandfather and a public servant, however,

I know the Government cannot afford to turn its back on this problem as long as there is a chance that our neglect will harm our young people and our society.”

Sen. John O. Pastore (D., R.I.) chairman, Senate Communications Subcommittee, has said, “Congress will not and cannot stand idly by and allow excesses or abuses to dominate this great medium, nor will it be stampeded by the cries of censorship every time an observation of a constructive nature is made to improve the quality of programming.”

At the other side of the Capitol, Rep. Oren Harris (D., Ark.) is chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. An angular, tight-lipped man, he spearheaded the investigations which exposed the TV quiz scandals a few years ago. When he was asked about the possibility of some of the new movies going on television, he said bluntly, “We are against controlled communications and for freedom. But if some of these people continue behaving the way they are, they’re going to have the Government on their necks.” Harris sees this as a function of the Federal Communications Commission’s licensing power. He says, “The television stations are in the business of operating in the public interest, and if they don’t know what the public interest is, they should lose their licenses.”

Sen. Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.), chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, points out, however, that the FCC has no control over programming. He calls attention to Section 326 of the Communications Act of 1934, which states: “Nothing in this Act shall be understood or construed to give the Commission the power of censorship over radio communications or signals transmitted by any radio station, and no regulation or condition shall be promulgated or fixed by the Commission which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communication." Radio here, of course, includes television.

The Federal Communications Commission has never revoked a TV station's license because of programming. An FCC aide says, "The Commission has just sort of thrown up its hands and said, 'We're worried but what can we do?' In an extreme we might act, but every step is mined."

Voluntary self-regulation by the networks and the stations is the solution most often put forward. Senator Magnuson says, "I am a firm believer in self-regulation, and I hope the television industry is mature enough to live up to its responsibility."

Only Senator Dodd seems dubious about self-regulation and the broadcasters' sense of responsibility, and perhaps he has good reason after years of listening to such exercises in self-serving semantics as that indulged in before his committee by James T. Aubrey Jr., recently deposed president of CBS-TV. Aubrey was quoted in a memorandum which came to the attention of the Dodd committee as wanting "broads, bosoms and fun" in Route 66. When questioned about this, Aubrey, who is sometimes referred to in the trade as "The Smiling Cobra," insisted that he had been misunderstood—what he had really asked for were "attractive, young, wholesome girls."

Such over-all industry self-regulation as there is rests primarily in the Code Authority of the National Association of Broadcasters. Howard H. Bell, director of the NAB Code Authority, is a pleasant young man who looks like a serious Bob Cummings. Although he admits that only 70 percent—approximately 400—of the television stations in the United States subscribe to the NAB Code, he feels that the work of his office has been effective. So far it has functioned primarily in the area of continued commercials, such as those for "Sex and the Single Girl." As for the movies themselves, Bell says, "Television is an extremely sensitive and powerful medium. You can say things in a theater you can't say in a living room. It's ironic that techniques television has brought about in motion pictures will become a problem for TV. But as sex and sensationalism become more and more important at the theater box office, they will also become an increasing problem for us."

What, if anything, does he intend to do about the problem? He says, "We don't want to take a holier-than-thou attitude. We don't want to be a super-censor and stifle the creative artist. But in our own area we must take action. If the sex pictures did go on, the public outcry would be tremendous—the hue and cry would be heard all the way from Hollywood to Capitol Hill."

What recourse does the NAB Code Authority have if its edicts are ignored? If the offending TV station is one of the 30 percent which do not subscribe, the Code Authority has no recourse at all, of course. If the defiant station is a subscriber, the worst that can happen is that its Code Seal will be taken away. So far, in the area of program content, this has never happened, but Bell insists that "broadcasters are very sensitive to opinion in their communities." However, when the first director of the NAB Code Authority, Robert D. Swezey, resigned his post, he said sadly, "It is virtually impossible for us to maintain industry standards in any practical sense. The public is still being victimized by the poor programming and shoddy practices of a large element of the industry which has no interest in standards and no compulsion to observe them."

Where, then, does the real responsibility for self-regulation lie? The networks maintain elaborate departments of continuity acceptance, which are supposed to screen everything that goes on the air. Perhaps they might have some answers. Or should we just stand by and wait for "Kiss Me, Stupid" and "The Carpetbaggers" to appear on TV—perhaps even Saturday Night at the Nudies?

'GOOD TO SEE YOU!
HOW'VE YOU BEEN?'

'THE BIGGEST FEET

SINCE GARBO'... and beauty to match

It has been said that she has "a quality of kooky elegance" and "the biggest feet since Garbo." David Niven sees in her "a rare and exciting quality that is quite different from any other actress around today." For Rod Steiger, she possesses "a sense of humor and intelligence that is a great combination."

She started acting in the second grade at Northridge, Cal., in the far reaches of the San Fernando Valley, where she starred in childish plays composed by another second-grader. When she reached her teens she was big for her age, clumsy and self-conscious. By that time she was going to Hollywood High School, where many of the girls were starlets or professional models—or at least pretended to be. "I was just a rustic Valley girl in saddle shoes," she says. "For the first six months I ate my lunch in the girls' bathroom."

To cover her self-consciousness she sang as she walked about. People would say, "My, aren't you happy today!" She recalls, "All the time I felt as if I had been run over by a car."

Her parents, dismayed at her 5 feet, 9 inches of height and her 168 pounds of heft, tried to discourage her from being an actress. "Are you sure you don't want to be a nurse?" they said. But she wanted more than anything else to be an actress. After high school, she paid her way through dramatic school by being an elevator operator, a swimming instructor and a typist. What little she knew about typing she taught herself the night before reporting for work. She says, "When I made mistakes, if the boss was watching me I'd keep right on typing as if nothing had happened. Then, when he wasn't looking, I'd slip the paper out of the typewriter, hide the letter in my dress and start over again."

She got her start as a professional actress in little theater around Hollywood, made her television debut as a husky pioneer woman in Cheyenne. She spent five years in analysis, trying to lose weight. "The analysis didn't work," she says. "I finally had to do it myself." Doing it "myself," she eventually lost 30 pounds.

On TV, she has appeared in The Alfred Hitchcock Hour, The Rogues, 12 O'clock High, Slattery's People and, most notably, a Bob Hope drama by Rod Serling, "A Slow Fade to Black," in which she played the disturbed daughter of a film magnate. She has recently completed her first motion picture, "The Third Day."

With her cocker spaniel, "Holly"—named after the character she plays in the movie—she lives in a little house behind another house in an older, unfashionable section of Hollywood. She takes singing lessons twice a week and says, "I'd love to do a musical comedy." But serious acting is still her first love. As for other loves, she says, "I'm so bored with actresses who say they couldn't marry actors. I couldn't marry a plumber—I'd have nothing in common with him. But I want to marry 20 actors!"

Whether she marries 20 actors or not, you may be hearing a lot about her in the future. Her name is Sally Kellerman.

You could say that the late Fred Allen was a star of radio, television, movies, vaudeville and the U.S. mails. For, in addition to being one of the great comedians of his time, he also was one of its most prolific and witty and wise writers of letters. People who received letters from Allen treasured them and, fortunately for posterity (since he seldom made carbon copies), saved many of them. Allen typed all his letters himself, two-finger style, on a portable. He never—well, hardly ever—used capital letters.

Now Fred Allen's letters—actually just a sampling of the thousands he wrote—have been collected by his widow, Portland Hoffa, and edited by Joe McCarthy. Their book is titled, simply, "Fred Allen's Letters," and it will be published later this week by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

Here, from the book—with Fred Allen's own lower-case style, spelling and punctuation—are a few of the letters he wrote during the last years of his life, when he was trying to find his proper niche in the brash new medium of television. As some of the letters indicate, he never felt at home in the medium, and he viewed television with no little hostility. He once said: "Television is called a medium because it's never well done."

These letters, arranged in chronological order, cover the years 1949 to 1956. They were written to: Groucho Marx, with whom Allen exchanged many letters; Alton Cook, critic for the New York World-Telegram and Sun and a long-time friend of Allen's; and comedy-writer-producer Hal Kanter, who created the original "George Gobel Show" (and this season's "Valentine's Day") and who had hoped to get the veteran comedian to do a television series with him.

this is the first chance i have had to answer your letter. it has been so damn foggy here we haven't been able to find our room and have been spending most of the time roaming the halls. the sun has been out only for a brief appearance in three days. either the rainmaker has lost control or god is getting even with people who expect to make a living fleecing tourists. if the room gets any damper i am going to get a couple of loaves of bread and start making some homemade penicillin.

re my television future. it is strange that you should write about the alley ["Allen's Alley," the most popular feature of his radio series—Ed.]. we had a great discussion about the alley at a meeting last week. some were for it and some were against it. one argument against it was that we shouldn't go into the new medium and give people the impression that we were merely putting the old radio devices before the cameras. another one was that all of the n.y. shows are going to be done in theatres. this means that everything will be photographed on the stage. there will be no opportunity to get effects of a walk down a street. the cameras will be all in front or from side angles. i wanted to eliminate the audience and try to do as you suggest with a decrepit alley or street but i was told that that thinking is for the future. at the moment the network and the client both want a revue type of show, with audience and everything else that will make the medium a bore in a hurry. . . .

as your friend i advise you to sell your typewriter, consign your files, (if any) to your incinerator (imagine if all of the comedy writers burned their files and a "laughing smog" set over all of southern california) get back your dues from the writers' guild (if possible) and give some serious thought to taking up a new profession. the day of the writer is done. the enclosed clipping tells the story. abc-tv won't consign writers to the henny youngman - rocky graziano show. they want it ad lib. you know as well as i know that youngman and rocky couldn't ad lib out of a drowning episode (youngman would never think of "help" unless he had heard somebody else say it first.).

all of these economy vagues get started in the east. it may not be long before you will report with the script some morning at rehearsal to be informed that the gobel show is dispensing with writers. as soon as your producer, mr. o'malley, learns about the youngman-graziano idea, he will follow suit. he will convince george [Gobel] that all he needs to kill the half hour is a brisk session of o'malley kicking it around with george, letting the quips fall where they may.

i don't know mr. o'malley but my aunt used to say "never trust a man you catch looking at you through his eyelids." a man who can do this is thin-skinned and barely able to contain himself. when i went to kindergarten i knew a man who looked like mr. o'malley. he used to hang around the school at recess, he used to whip out a beanshooter and siphon the

if my book ["Much Ado About Me," the second volume of his autobiography—Ed.] was finished i would be happy to talk over the tv idea. i have a definite commitment - a double commitment - that obligates me to deliver the completed epic to the sat eve post and the little, brown co. i have only finished nine chapters - am completing the tenth this week - and will need four more chapters to abandon my author phase. when the 14 chapters have been completed i will have to go up to boston to go through the entire book with the editor for cutting and polishing. since i am not a writer i find that, closeted with my pencil and lilywhite paper, i can only hack out from 800 to 1200 words a day. going at this speed, unless my life span holds out, i may never finish the bloody tome. "treadmill to oblivion" [the first volume of his autobiography—Ed.] used up all of the radio years and the editor is coming over next week to try to devise some way to squeeze a chapter or two out of radio without repeating. if things go smoothly i doubt if i can finish the cutting and editing before deember. i have no deadline. the story will only be sold once and with my limited vocabulary and lumbering pace i want to spend as much time as i require to do it well.

any writer, who has the skill and opportunity, should protect himself in television. somebody recently told me that on the "i love lucy" residuals jess oppenheimer [head writer of I Love Lucy—Ed.] is getting 10% of the $30,000 desi is catching. with all of the shows you have done the past two seasons you could tremble in your old age in affluence.

one of the reasons i started the book was because after 19 years of radio success and drudgery i found that the tax dept. had most of the money and, after i put "two for the money" with goodson and tozman and then lost it through sickness, i decided to take it easier. photogenically i do not come off too well and i didn't want to analyze the medium for my purposes with intent to do my own show again. some time ago i talked with henry morgan about doing a weekly discussion about the news. henry was eager but it was the book again. i promised to talk to him later. when i finish with the book i will talk to anybody who will talk to me. i appreciate your offer and would rather be associated with you than anyone else i know. the next time we meet we can talk about it.
